

"A SMALL TOWN GIRL," OLD THEME HANDLED IN NEW WAY—MAN PAYS PIPER

"A SMALL TOWN GIRL" THREE-REEL REX-UNIVERSAL FEATURE

"A Small Town Girl," a three reel Rex-Universal human interest feature, to be released Jan. 17, is a drama of world old situations told in a new way by a company of players who have gained the topmost rung in the "screen" profession. Robbed of its triteness by masterly treatment, the theme has been molded into a work of power and beauty.

One important point that is brought out in the photo play is this—contrary to the conventional belief, the man is made to pay the piper in the end. In fact, there is no escaping the fact that the man will always pay just as dearly as the woman. The theme is one that has the broadest kind of an appeal. The work of Pauline Bush and Murdock MacQuarrie is especially noteworthy. It reaches the heart, than which nothing better can be said. The story:

Pauline, an orphan, lives with her uncle, the proprietor of the only hotel in Maplehurst. Dick, the clerk, is in love with Pauline, but he does not suit her ideal of a Prince Charming because he is too much of a rustic,
